Do you need to edit your PowerPoint presentation on Google slides, but don't know how? No need to worry. We're going to cover you. Since Google Slides and Microsoft PowerPoint are the two most popular presentation software programs, both companies have convinced them that their files are compatible. Although Google slides don't have some Powerpoint effects and features, the conversion process still works very well. Below, we'll show you how to convert a PowerPoint presentation to Google Slides. Go to Google Drive All you need to access google drive is a Google Account. If you have a Gmail address, you already have a Google Account. If you don't, create it as soon as you read how to create a Google Account. Start navigating Google Drive. There's two ways. One option is to put in your web browser, where you'll be taken directly to your Google Drive. Another option is to access your Drive on any Google page. For example, if you're signed in to Google (if you're not asked to), click the grid icon near the profile picture in the upper-right corner of the screen and select Drive. When someone has shared a presentation with you, it appears under Presentations. Hover over the search bar and view the file options open. Click Presentations. If it's not shared, you'll need to upload it from your computer. To upload or drag a PowerPoint presentation from Google Drive, click New under Drive. Select a PowerPoint presentation from your computer location and upload it to your Drive. A confirmation message appears at the bottom right of your pc screen, letting you know when the upload is complete. You can also drag a presentation file directly from your computer to Your Google Drive. If you don't see your file on your drive, refresh the page, and if you uploaded it correctly, it's the first listed file. Right-click the presentation file, see Open with, and then click Google Slides. Google automatically converts your slides from Powerpoint to Google Slide format. As mentioned above, not all PowerPoint features work on Google slides. Get a notification from Google to learn more about which features aren't working. In this case, some text effects, animations, and picture effects don't work correctly on Google slides and they're removed. The presentation file is now ready to edit, share, or download. Import your PowerPoint presentation directly into Your Google Slides Sign in to your Google Drive account. Click the New button under the Drive logo that you clicked above. Select Google Slides from the drop-down menu and select a blank presentation. In the new, blank presentation, click the File tab, click Open, and then click Upload. You will then see the picture below. Drag and drop a PowerPoint presentation computer area that says Drag the file here. You can also click the blue button and find the file on your computer to upload it. Your PowerPoint presentation is automatically converted to Google slides. This method does not transfer. PPTX extension in the file name as another process. How to convert some slides rather than the entire presentation to Start your Google Slides dashboard. On the File menu, click Import Slides. Now you see two options. You can choose a presentation that's already on Google Drive, or upload it from your computer. Select the presentation you want to use. For both options, all the slides included are available for selection. Select the slides you want to import, and then click Import Slides. The slides you selected are now on your Google slides, ready to edit. To share with others, click Share Yellow. You can share your presentation with specific people by entering their name or email address. As the above screenshot shows, you have three ways to split the file with selected specific people. They are: Can be changed. Have a comment. You can watch. If you are working with a project co-worker or customer, you'd probably want to allow them to edit the presentation. If you click Advanced in the lower-right corner of the pop-up window, you'll see several additional ways to share. Other options, as shown above, are as follows: Share Facebook or TwitterSend link via emailAdding access to change privateControl owner settings What else can you do with your Google Slides Presentation? To see what else you can do with the new file, back to Your Google Drive and right-click the presentation. Download a presentation You can also download your Google Slides presentation by going to the File menu and holding your mouse on the Google Slides dashboard Download. If you only want to download your edited presentation from PowerPoint (not the other screenshot options above), you can do so from your Google Drive dashboard. Right-click the file and select Download. When the download is complete, a pop-up box appears that asks you to open the file in PowerPoint. As you can see, it's easy to convert a PowerPoint presentation to Google slides. All it takes is a few steps and your file will be automatically converted to Google. Google Docs are undeniably useful, but lighting up a new document, spreadsheet or presentation and staring at an empty slide can be scary. That's why Google introduced templates for Google's documents, pages, and slides in September to help users get started without so much initial setup work. Now Google has enlisted the help of five experts in its respective areas to add a new handful of templates to the service, and they were announced yesterday. Not every it is necessary for every one of the new templates because they are a little more specialized than most templates introduced last year, but it's nice to know that Google is going to stretch beyond the original little templates offered. For a small business owner, Google looked to Intuit, the accounting software makers of QuickBooks. This resulted in the preparation of an annual form for planning a business budget aimed at helping individuals and businesses control their finances. Meanwhile, brothers Chip and Dan Heath, authors of the best-selling Made a Stick, provided a great idea for template slides designed to help users create compelling presentations. Google itself even joined the party through GV, formerly Google Ventures, which knows a thing or two about what it takes at startup to get funded. This knowledge is used well to pitch template slides that uses proven presentation tactics to help entrepreneurs pitch their ideas. Not all new templates, however, are aimed at businesses and professionals. Google also looked at Reading Rainbow and its host, LeVar Burton, to create templates for both teachers and students, a new lesson plan and book report templates for Docs. Google jumped again, taking inspiration from the Google Science Fair to create a template for Slides designed, yes, for science fairs. Over the past few years, Google Docs haven't exactly stagnated, but it hasn't seen a steady handful of updates from many other Google products and services available. As of last year, however, this seems to be changing. With these new templates and a new voice typing feature introduced last month, it seems Google has bigger things planned for Docs. New templates are all now available in document, pages, and slides. Get started with Google Docs.
